Chauvin Magistrate Becomes A Benedict

It is our pleasant duty to place on record the marriage at Edmonton, of our pioneer citizen, Mr. A. Keith and Mrs. Gladys Annie Porryan, of Bradford, England. The marriage was celebrated in the home of Rev and Mrs. Wm Simons, Thursday April 15th.

After the ceremony, at which Rev. Wm Simons, assisted by Mr. T. H. McAllister, officiated, a wedding breakfast was served. The happy couple spent a week in the city before returning home, during which period they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Barclay and of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McClung.

A most heavy reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. Keith on their return to Chauvin, and though some of the more boisterous plans for their reception did not materialize, there was no mistaking the expressions of pleasure and good feeling to the happy couple. Mr. Andrew Petrie was a visitor to the Killarney district last week. He intimated that as regards the shape the trails are in, in these parts, that "we sure look like a bunch of orphans". Mr. Petrie spoke with the deep feeling of a person who had had a narrow escape from a watery grave. Luckily he lost nothing of value in his numerous spills, except maybe, the ink out of his fountain pen!

The meeting was then adjourned.

Local Notes Of Interest

Talking about hens and egg circles is all the vogue since the visit of Mr. Clyde, the Government Poultry Expert. Those of us who say we know a lot of things more interesting than a hen, are frowned upon by progressive Egg Circles, as being behind the times.

The latest diversion of the Farmer's Boy is to watch his egg before he sets it, to see if it is under or over two ounces, for, he says, that Mr. Clyde said that it was a mistake to use the biggest egg for setting purposes. But we suspect this is just another ruse, to commandeer all the biggest eggs for breakfast!

Also he has been provided with far too good an excuse for chasing hens, when caught redhanded before he had NO excuse to offer, now he says that he was just trying to get close enough up to, to measure the pelvic bone to see if she ever laid an egg? Or else he can say that her egg has rings on the end of it and that means she's too fat, so he thinks a good chase will thin her down a bit."

But it's an ill-wind that blows nobody good, for where before he never could remember to feed them their ground shells, now having been informed, that these were the "plumb" thing for poultry, he suggests that to provide them with enough grit, he is willing to eat three eggs instead of two, at a sitting!

An egg circle has been formed in the Killarney District with Messrs Sample, Furbush and Carford as managers and directors.

Mr. Clyde spent some time culling the flocks in the district also; But with what results the owners of the flocks, can give a more accurate account perhaps, than a mere scribble.

Handicapped By A Hibernating Habit

We notice in a small newspaper that "Mr. Blair, M.P. for Battle River, is interesting himself looking after feed for stock in his constituency." This looks to us like a move in the right direction but too slow, to be as good of the new grass. But where has Mr. Blair been all these long months when we could have appreciated his paternal help?

Is it the spring air that has roused him or merely a hint of a coming election day?

The Little Wonder—The Stuart train to the Scott experimental farm during the summer will also be discussed at this meeting.

New G. G. Local Is Organized: Marsden

The new local of the Grain Growers was organized at a meeting in the Cliffe school with an initial membership roll of twelve.

Mr. P. M. Chapman kindly acted as chairman, at the request of those present.

The following officers were elected: President; P. M. Chapman Vice-President; C. Newport

Directors: J. Reid, B. S. Brown, H. B. Polkinghorne. The latter acting as secretary.

Mr. Chapman gave an instructive and interesting address upon the subject of hospitals. In his address he traced the development of the ideals of hospital work from its genesis in biblical times, portraying the kindly ministrations of good Samaritans to the wounded traveller, and the further development of the idea in the monastic hospitals of the middle ages, and onward through the centuries until the present day, when the scope of hospital work and service is more widespread and efficient than ever before, having at its command a broader and more scientific knowledge, better instruments and a vast host of highly skilled doctors and nurses.

During the past months the speaker had acted as a delegate for the municipal meetings to the meetings of the United Hospital Board. This scheme provided for having an association only of the local hospitals of the community, and the hospital was located at a considerable distance. The provisions of the act were such that once this section of the municipality were included in the United scheme it would not be possible for them to obtain a hospital in a nearer and more convenient centre that might later be found when the railroad should be extended. Last season the district had been canvassed by two citizens of Unity, who had obtained a number of signatures to their petition. It was represented that the signatures were those in favor of having a vote taken on the question, and that the scheme would only become effective upon a majority of two-thirds of the voters being favorable to the scheme. It now appears that this two-thirds majority is a two-thirds majority of the whole proposed hospital district and not of any portion thereof. Thus the southern half of the Manitou district might not have a majority in favor of the scheme and yet find itself included therein. There was a state of things not anticipated by those who signed the petition. In view of the distance to Unity, and in view of the possibilities of the future the speaker was of the opinion that the district could better afford to wait awhile than enter the United scheme.

The matter was thoroughly discussed, both by the members of the newly formed local and the visitors from the Brady local and later a resolution was passed petitioning the municipal council of Manitou Lake not to enter the United Hospital District.

The matter of chartering a special train to the Scott experimental farm during the summer will also be discussed at this meeting.

Butze U. F. A.

The next meeting of the Butze U.F.A. will be held Friday April 23rd at 2 p.m. in the residence of Mr. H. Beater. The matter of binder twine will be discussed; it being proposed to act in conjunction with the district association in obtaining a curfew of twine.

The matter of chartering a special train to the Scott experimental farm during the summer will also be discussed at this meeting.

Seeding Commenced

Seeding wheat was started to day by Mr. A. Price. His land being in good shape for seeding.

R. M. Manitou Lake Council Meeting

Minutes of Council Meeting held Monday 19th 5th. 1920.

The regular monthly meeting of the Council of the above-named Municipality was held at Marsden, Monday April 19th, the Reeve and Councillors, Coo, Lawson, Williams, Bellamy and Stewart being present. The business transacted consisted of applications to the Department of Highways and Road surveys, payment of compensation for Diversions, submission of data with reference to the making of concrete culverts etc, applications for Government Grants for Main Roads, advances of Seed Grain, appointment of auditor, extension of date on which Herd Law became effective, appointment of Poundkeepers, letting of contract for poisoning gophers on unoccupied land, passing of resolutions on Hospital matters and report of delegates to the Convention of Municipalities at Saskatoon.

In connection with the Municipal By-Law governing the running at large of Stray Animals, it was resolved that the Council of the Reeve, until May 29th, on account of the scarcity of feed and the leanness of the season, the matter of the Municipal Hospital Tax was discussed and it was resolved unanimously that taxpayers paying taxes on buildings only (as in the case of Hamlets or Villages) should not be eligible for free Hospital treatment unless they pay the regular Hospital Tax of $2.00 per head or $4.00 per family.

The meeting came to a close at 5.30 p.m., with the report of the delegates to the Convention of Municipalities at Saskatoon. The date of the next meeting was set for Monday May 19th.

OUR GREAT MEN

(Being a paper written by Ken. W. Coo; read at the Brady School, March 26th at meeting of the Mutual Improvement Society)

This is the fifth paper of our Mutual Improvement Society and the previous four have been of such an excellent nature that I am afraid you will be disappointed in this one. The previous subjects have been of a controversial nature. But this, I take it, merely a resume of some of our great men; and when this subject was allotted to me I was in two minds, as to whether I would take past and present day men, or confine myself to the living great; and in finally deciding upon the latter course I was actuated by the reason that it would be less confusing to the paper. Another difficulty in my way was the number from which I had to choose (for I am limiting my paper to three), and in choosing these three I am not forgetting those whom I may have considered greater, but the three chosen will (in my opinion) cover my paper.

RT. HON. LLOYD GEORGE

The first man I wish to speak of is the Right Hon. David Lloyd George, premier of the Mother Country. Born in a Welsh village, he was the son of a schoolmaster. His father died when he was a year old, and the fortunes of the family was committed to an uncle, a poor man, but honest. Poverty has never yet prevented the poor from befriending the destitute, and into the house of the cobble-uncle was warmly welcomed the schoolmaster, finally who included in a pinfold and bare legs, the present premier. It was hard work to squeeze them in, still harder work to provide them with food, but the good uncle toiled at his cobbling, and contrived to support those whom, being a religious man, he reckoned that Providence had committed to his charge. Politics touched Lloyd George's life, but subconsciously, when he was six years of age. His chief friends were some of the local farmers, they were fine fellows and fearless children of Wales. A general election took place, Lloyd George was elected, and the present premier was marched up and down the village street with a tiny liberal flag, given to him by his mother. It was a grand day, he strutted tremendously. But soon after he missed his playmates. They disappeared. It was as if the generous life had swallowed them up. Then he heard that his mother had been turned out of their farms by the landlords for voting liberal. He concluded then that politics was a poor game. But, he said later, that action of the landlords was the death-blow to their political influence in Wales. And when the time came, Wales is easy to rouse on such questions. We got up a rational subscription for the ex-communited farmers. We made landlords shake in their shoes. They have never dared to interfere so shamefully in elections since the day that the aged 16 years old Lloyd George came to the scene of the darkness lifted. Among the books of his dead father he discovered the supreme work of Thomas Carlyle, the "Sartor Resartus". The lonely and desolate youth in the Welsh village read this book with a slow, but increasing light on the darkness of his soul. And at last illumined the home.

It was that sentence which says of dogmas that they are to be torn up to make bandages for the bleeding wounds of humanity that brought the full light. The youth realized with a great rush of relief, the truth of Goethe's saying that the question is not what a man believes, but how much he believes. He felt himself unprisoned, enfranchised. He had discovered religion. Religion is service. Christ is the master and servant of mankind. Henceforth he had purpose in his mind, faith in his soul, and a God to serve, and a heaven to strive for. But not for many years did the thought of a political life enter his mind. He was 21 years of age when an event occurred, as though predestined, which gave a new impulse to his character, and effected his whole after life. An old man died in the neighborhood, who expressed on his death bed a desire to be buried beside his dead daughter. The clergyman of the parish agreed; the grave was dug, but when it was told that a Non-conformist service was to be read at the funeral, the clergyman refused his sanction, and ordered the grave to be filled up. The family came to Lloyd George for advice. His advice was not guided by books of law, but by honest passion of an ennobling indignation. He told people to break down the church gates, to carry the dead body to the grave, and to hold their service against all the interference of clericalism. The advice led to an action in a court of law, and to something more. It led Lloyd George to the platform. The world discovered him as an orator. From the platform he passed to parliament, and from parliament, he passed with increasing honor to administrative functions of highest importance.

In the State. On all sides he was acknowledged as the most successful president who had been in the Board of Trade for many years, and in all the tempest and fury aroused by the budget of 1909, one heard quiet and authoritative voices proclaiming that he had proved a far-seeing chancellor, who brought political genius to the finances of the nation. He was bright, an clever. The clergyman of the village school when he remembers with affection, he offers him every inducement, and made every possible concession to his Non-conformity to persuade him to become a pupil teacher. This he could not do. His uncle had determined to make him a solicitor, and with every sacrifice imaginable contrived to fulfil this ambition for his nephew. Lloyd George was content. He could follow an interesting and honorable profession, and he could be useful to those about him in his native land. What more could he desire?

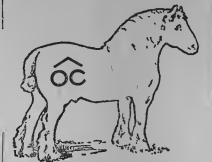

His career since the dark days of 1914 is known to you all. How he handled the munitions question, how he settled labor disputes, how he became premier of the greatest land under the sun. His wonderful services at the Peace Conference.

No man, I assure you, was less of a demagogue. No man that I have ever seen, sees the future of humanity with wider eyes and steeper vision. He is a statesman, a statesman of imagination, and a profound sympathy. He wanted to make the country and everyone in it. He meant to do it. He knows how he can do it.

Ferdinand Foch was born at Tarbes, on October 23rd 1851. He was the eldest of three boys. His father was Secretary General of the Prefecture.

Tarbes is one of those beautiful little townships lying in the lovely country at the foot of the Pyrenees. His life at school was not marked by an striking feature. He was a studious hardworking lad, and perhaps rather serious for his age. Foch arrived in Metz to take up studies just before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war. He was eleven years old. He left Metz and joined the army for the period of the war. He was posted to infantry regiment, in which he served until the signing of peace in 1871. On leaving the army he returned to Saint Clement to complete his studies. His return to the capital of Lorraine made a painful impression on young Foch's mind. The college was partly occupied by German troops, and on their way to their studies the students were constantly running into the soldiers of the army of occupation. This was an un-faceable memory. Forty-two years later (1913) when he joined to the command of the 20th Lorraine Corps, he arranged that there should be, on the day he entered Nancy a great musical retreat taken part in by the bands and trumpeters of the six town regiments. It was an unforgettable night. The strains of the martial airs went far to blot out the painful memories of 1871 that had haunted him all his life.

General Foch was intrusted with the command of the 20th Corps just when the threatening war-clouds were gathering over Europe. The Balkan crisis had raised so many immediate desires that it was almost bound to be but the first spark in a general conflagration. Since 1912 Germany had flung discretion to the winds, and embarked upon a program of armaments, the extent of which could be judged by the enormous tax levied on the German people. To counter balance this France had passed the Three Year Militia Service Act. With a very clear idea of the imminence of the danger, Marshal Foch had worked hard to get Nancy adequately fortified. But all the same he did not see the terrible consequences that the assassination on July 23rd 1914 and, above all, the sudden breaking off of diplomatic relations between Vienna and Belgrade in spite of Serbia's conciliatory reply of July 25th were needed to open the eyes of France. It was quite obvious now that the Central Powers wanted war. General Foch was recalled on July 26th. The hour of the German thrust was at hand. Practise was going to take the place of theory. In these first days of war General Foch's whole teaching at the Staff College, was, as it were, crystallized in his brain. After what he had taught to many youths who were now commanding units, he was convinced that French teaching must triumph. If, (so he reasoned) the Germans beat us in 1870, we must look for the cause we must divine the secret of their victory or of our own weakness. And so, General Foch used to say to his young students "Later, you will be asked to be the brain of an army, I tell you to-day: Learn to think." General Foch commanded the 20th (French) army Corps in 1914, and this corps at that time, was, perhaps, the finest army corps the whole French army but later in the year he was summoned by General Joffre to take command of a new army. General Foch found himself confronted by an extremely difficult problem. The major part of the troops belonging to the 4th army under General DeCayard had been in retreat. ated with this corps, and when General Foch took command he was ignorant of the manners and morals of these troops. To take all these troops in hand, distribute officers and get acquainted with the units he commanded was the task suddenly thrust upon General Foch. He was impassioned in his search for information, and closed the information he received with that impassable method which is the strong point of that luminous brain of his. All this time he had no news of his son, or son-in-law (fighting in Belgium) but this was no time for private emotions. The father gave place to the soldier. Nothing but country mattered. He was chosen by General Joffre as the command of the army on the Marne. He knew he could command of this army to reach the utter limits of human resistance, as they did in the first fighting in the Ardennes when they were "raving" with fatigue. His favorite aphorism "A gainful battle is a battle in which one will not consider himself beaten." The story goes—and it is probably true, for it is quite like him—that one afternoon when the withdrawal of one corps, and a retreat of another corps had just been reported to him, he telegraphed more or less, in these words to the General Headquarters more or less in these words:—"My centre yielding, my right retreating, excellent situation, I am attacking." Such is the man. Then he has transferred and promoted to the command of the Northern Army and took a prominent part in the battle of the Yser. When the British troops were hotly attacked at Ypres in Oct. 1914, and had to yield considerable ground. General Foch motored as quickly as he could to see Field Marshal Sir John French and said to him "Is it true that your line has been broken?" "Yes," replied the British Commander. Have you any reserves?" None, was the reply "Well, you can have mine, we must fill the gap at once, if the Germans get thro at a single point we are lost because of the enemies huge attacking forces. I have eight battalions of the General is sending me. Take them and on you go!" By two o'clock the orders were given out and the gap filled. Characteristic of the man was his reply to Sir John French, when Sir John remarked "What a terrific battle you did fight!" Foch's reply was "We must stand firm first, we can die afterwards."

Never has a man in the history of the world commanded such immense armies as General Foch has done. Never has a soldier had so much successful career. Before the war, in every grade of his life, as an officer, he had given proof of his talent. The war provided the opportunity for him to develop and expand his undoubted mastery of his craft. He had been raised to supreme power, not by any stroke of fortune, or some unexpected brilliant success, but by steady and increasing manifestation of his military genius. He made his mark simply, without intrigue and without advertisement, because he had proved the best man and the most deserving. In 1915 he was made Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor. In 1918 he was made Grand Cross. In 1918 he received the Medal Militaire (the highest distinction given to generals). He wears the Croix de Guerre with palm leaves, and several foreign orders of the highest distinction. Yet no man without an hint of modesty, or more simple. Everyone who has had the honor of his acquaintance has been struck by his somewhat abrupt cordiality which is rather frightening at first, but soon becomes so attractive. Spaking to some young officer, he said, "Young man, without an hint of jealousy, without a spiritual conception of life, there can only be discouragement and weakness. You are asked to make great sacrifices, and you will go on being asked until the bitter end. Accept them. I have accepted mine. Not only France but the whole of humanity is at stake. Liberty must fit of all triumph, then we can keep a our empty hearths, over which was the 'standards of Victory'."

Such was as Marshall Foch, the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces and on of our greatest men.

SIR ALFRED HARMSWORTH

Alfred armsworth—Sir Alfred Harmsworth, Lord Northcliffe is a man who has played many parts in the latter history of England. He started in life as a special newspaper reporter, the first Journal that he owned was a weekly named "Answers" a little later he made a new innovation in the shape of a monthly magazine, at this price of four pence half penny (9 cents) called the "Harmsworth Magazine". At this time he was a Liberal member of Parliament, having been returned for one of the London divisions. The first half-penny morning paper published in England had him for its proprietor, and it was this paper that brought him into real prominence. The Conservative party was then in power, and the "Daily Mail" was always a thorn in its side. Its policy was independent. The Liberal party came into power, and when they were in power in 1906 it turned its attention to them. Lord Northcliffe was responsible for the bringing to book of these Cabinet Ministers, through their dealings with Private Companies who were granted charters by the British Government. The downfall of the Asquith Government which had (in Northcliffe's opinion) allowed things to pass which should have had prompt attention. There were many infringements of the Internment laws, and in fact things were in such a state that Lord Northcliffe started a campaign (through his newspapers) which resulted in the overthrow of the Government. Previous to this however he had become owner of several other newspapers, including the "Daily Telegraph", "Daily Chronicle", "Morning Post" and numerous provincial papers, which were all widely read. Mr. Lloyd George was commanded by the King to form a Cabinet, he had no warmer supporter than Lord Northcliffe who recognised the greatness of the "Little Welshman". He also, along with Lord Derby formed what was known as the "Derby" scheme of recruiting which was a plan by which every eligible man was personally canvassed with a view of obtaining their services, voluntarily, for the period of the war. The scheme was highly successful but in the end it was found necessary to force conscription and raise the age limit to 51. The manoeuvres of the Pacifist party which included Henderson, Ramsey McDonald, Philip Snowden and other avowed Socialists were nipped in the bud by Northcliffe, and at the last general election they were all opposed to defeat, and the great factor in their losing their seats was the opposition of the Northcliffe Press. He was always opposed to the Dardanelles operations, and bitterly attacked Winston Churchill when Antwerp was abandoned in 1914. He was appointed as representative of the British Government (he refused Cabinet positions on several occasions) many times, and along with Lord Reading was sent on a special secret mission to the United States armed with full authority to act for Great Britain. He is, and always has been a believer in the people governing the people, and is totally opposed to the old party system. He is a man not much past middle age, and has a great career before him, and in some quarters is spoken of as the next Premier. Time alone will show that, but his splendid services to Great Britain during the late war has certainly stamped him as one of our Great men.

In placing these three characters in front of you, you will notice that one is a politician, one is a military leader and genius, and the third is the man behind both. For neither of the first two can do without the third, and the three combined make the combination complete, and these three men have had much to do with the Victory that was ours. I am afraid I have been rather lengthy in my paper, but my excuse must be the importance and greatness of the men whom I have had the pleasure of speaking about and no one of the three could have been left out in any paper that was dealing with "Our Great Men."

Lives of all great men rented us. We may make our lives sublime. And departing, leave behind us, Footprints in the sands of time.

 His gum boots where were they? Not only were they full of feet. They "squeezed" with sand and clay. A wiser and a better man. He homeward went his way.

THE CRANE AND THE WISE CRAB

A crane grew too old and too feeble to catch the fish that lived in a lake close to his nest. So he resolved to do by cunning what he could not do by force. And he said to a crab in the lake!

"My dear friend, whatever will you and all the fishes do now? Some men are coming presently to drain every drop of water out of the lake. You'll all be caught and killed!"

On hearing the dreadful news, all the fishes assembled to try and find some way of escape.

"I have thought of a plan," said the cunning old Crane. "Of course I eat one or two of you now and then; but I don't want you to perish in a heap for want of water. What good would that do to me. Now, there is a large pond just a few hundred yards away. Let me carry you, one by one, in my beak to this safe place."

The fishes got an old carp to go with the crane and see if there was such a pond. The Crane took him very gently in his beak and showed him the new stretch of water, and then put him back among his companions, and when the fishes heard about the pond, they cried.

"Very well, Mr. Crane; you can take us all with you!"

The cunning old Crane meant to take the fishes one by one in his beak, and eat them under a tree far away from the pond; but unhappily for him, he began with the wise Crab.

"Come along," he said to the Crab, "and let me take you in my beak to the new pond."

"I don't like to trust myself in your beak," said the Crab. "You might let me fall and break my shell. We crabs have a famous grip. Let me catch hold of you round the neck, and then you can take me."

The Crane did not see that the Crab was trying to outwit him, and agreed to the proposal. But when the Crab was fixed on his neck, instead of going to the pond he went to the tree.

"Where is the pond?" said the Crab. "There!" said the wicked old Crane, "Do you think I'm taking all this trouble for nothing? The whole thing is just a trick for catching you and the other fishes, one by one, and eating you."

"Just what I thought," said the Crab. And he drove his claws into the neck of the wicked old Crane, and killed him.

"The wicked and the cunning are always caught in their own traps."

DWARF TREES

Take an orange and scoop the inside out very carefully so as not to injure the skin. Fill it with fine feaf mould and then put in the seeds.

The seeds will grow into a little tree.

Presently the roots will burst through, but these must be shaved off and the ends varnished.

Later the little tree can be put into a pot. It will grow very slowly, but it will look very attractive and quite worth your trouble.

THE END OF THE WAR

On the Basans docks at Bordeaux, France, an old-time sergeant of a negro regiment was having trouble with a detail of men of his own race, who seemed inclined to loaf on their work of loading box cars with provisions for the Army of Occupation. Addressing one negro, who was specially lazy, he exclaimed:

"Come on you. Git to work dar—" "Shucks, sergeant" replied the lazy one. "Ah listed foh de woh, Ya-s-s-l over."

"Yo's all's a darn fool," the sergeant yelled, "Yo' listed foh de wah, Ya-s-s-l An' also foh de duration' of de wah. Now, nigger, de wahs hit's over, but de 'Duration', hit's jes' done begun!"

Log Riding Wager

Fred Holbrook distinguished himself as a log rider Tuesday afternoon. He and Eddie Cry made a wager in the matter of riding a log across the lake in the centre of the town. Fred navigated around several times in a highly skilful manner. Eddie however found the log rolling under him at a rapidly increasing speed, finally it got too quick for him and he alighted in quite deep water.

are May 13th, 14th and 15th. The outlines of the program have been drawn up and so far everything seems to promise a most successful session. Outside and local speakers will address the meetings, all of which are to be held in the Wainwright school.

The committee in charge aim to make the programme as practical as possible. It is sincerely hoped that all teachers will feel it their duty to attend and help make the convention a success. Accommodation will be secured for those attending in private houses throughout the town. Further information will be available in succeeding issues of the paper.

Organization For Bathing Club 1920

BECOME A MEMBER OF THE CHAUVIN BATHING CLUB

The intimation that we might lose our bathing beach was not received with much rejoicing by our citizens yesterday and a general desire on the part of many was evidenced by the prompt preparation of a short agreement to form a club and secure the rights to the portion of Salt Lake that has been enjoyed by the public as a Bathing Resort for several years.

About four years ago some half dozen or more of our citizens provided a fund and devoted their time to the erection of the small bath houses, seats and tables that are now in evidence on the grounds.

The increasing popularity of the place as a bathing beach has made these rude improvements altogether inadequate to accommodate the numbers that now frequent the place, and other arrangements must be made.

In order that everyone may have equal privileges and that a small fund may be created to pay the rental of the grounds and make the necessary improvements for the accommodation and comfort of all, a fee of $2.00 is required, for which a membership ticket will be given entitling the holder and his family to the use of the grounds for the season.

In becoming a member you will understand that the grounds will be controlled by the regulations adopted for the government of all public bathing places.

We, the undersigned subscribers, being desirous of forming a society for the purpose of promoting public interests by securing the rights to that portion of Salt Lake shore for bathing purposes, hereby consent to the following regulations.

1. That the name and address of the Society shall be "The Chauvin Bathing Club," Chauvin Alberta.

2. That the Membership Fee shall be Two (2) dollars, payable in advance, which fee will entitle each member and his family to the privileges of the Club for one year. All are eligible for Membership.

3. That the following members shall be appointed as trustees, to look after the business and social interests of the Club for one year, with full power to adjust membership fees, lease a portion of the beach, make improvements, paying therefor from the funds of the Club, and enforce such regulations as are deemed desirable for the welfare of the Club.

George McNutt, Thomas Cote, Jeff Swan, C. G. Forryan, H. N. Freeman.

4. The members severally agree to support the Trustees in their efforts to sustain at all times, proper conduct and good moral and social order as well as proper care are regards Fire etc.

5. That the privileges of the Club are for the Members and their friends only. All others desiring to use the grounds may be permitted to do so by first arranging with the trustees.

"It is healthy to breathe through your nose, isn't it?" remarked the Old Fogey.

"Yes," replied the Grouch. "You can't talk while you are breathing through your nose."

"Alky fell in love with a girl at the glove courtier. He bought gloves every day for a week. To discourage his intentions, she became a manicurist."

"Then he had his nails manicured every day, I suppose?"

"Just so. However, I don't think he will follow her any farther."

"Why not?"

"Then she got employment with a dentist."

"Is your wife one of those women who look at their husbands and say, 'I made a man of him'?" asked the impatient friend.

"No," answered Mr. Meekton. "My Henrietta is very unassuming. She merely says she has done her best."

Tenders

Tenders are required by the Trustees of the Learg S. D. No 3331, for the breaking and working down of the school site comprising two acres.

Breaking to be at least 3 1/2 inches deep; land to be double disced twice, harrowed twice floated and packed. All surface stone to be removed.

Work to be completed in June. Tenders to be in Secretary's office not later than May 10th 1920.

X-Ray A Modern Diagnosis Method

The routine use of the X-ray in the diagnosis of internal diseases such as cancer of the stomach, tuberculosis of the lungs, etc., has now come to be recognized as one of the most important. An interesting fact is given where 1140 drafted men for the U.S. overseas service at one point were examined for chest disease. In 24 per cent of these 1140 men the physical examination failed to reveal a disqualifying chest disease, but in each of these the X-ray had clearly demonstrated the ailment. The X-ray it will be seen is sufficient in itself to diagnose the presence of tuberculosis or other such disease in the human body.

When Horses May Outdo A Tractor: Figures Can Show

On Short Sharp Pull Two Horses
Often More Powerful

A two-horse team can pull as much as a 15-30 tractor, statistics furnished by W. H. Sanders of the farm engineering department and by Dr. C. W. McCampbell of the animal husbandry department, Kansas State Agricultural college, indicate. The rating of a tractor is 80 per cent of the total horse power which the tractor is able to develop, Mr. Sanders states. Thus a 15-horse tractor could pull 18 3/4 horse-power on the drawbar.

A horse can exert a pull equal to two thirds of its weight for a short time, Dr. McCampbell says. Horses are capable of pulling at three and a half miles per hour or better, and thus a team of two horses weighing between 1500 and 1600 pounds a piece can develop 10 horsepower easily enough.

The difference in the amount of power is not great if the pull is for only a few moments, but if the pull is a long one it would be impossible for the horses to compare at all favorably with the tractor.

Then, this is the difference between is good for a long, even pull and the horse is especially adapted to a much lighter pull. This explains why a team can often pull a load when a large tractor cannot.

Fall Rye For Early Pasture

Harvey Hanson, in Farmers
Advocate, Feb. 11th

In this district I have not seen any method of cropping or rotating that gives as large a yield of wheat as doubt, we will soon have to change our methods to get away from soil drifting, although when we do I think our big wheat yields are over, too.

I saw several fields in corn in this district last year that made it look as if it was worth while to plant corn on land intended for summerfallow, but this would mean lots of expense in order to get the land ready in time—besides last year was an exceptionally good year for corn.

I tried a new stunt, fall sowing. As soon as I got the grain cut I hauled the bundles off from about 15 acres, and stroked and stubbled it in to fall rye. I made quite a bit of pasture, and next spring I expect to pasture or cut for hay and then plow it along with the rest of the summerfallow, and next spring I expect to cut it. So far I have found it a good way as possible and then arrange it so that I can turn the cattle in. They keep the weeds down and pack the soil and you get the manure as well. Until corn or clover has been tried out more this method will have to do me for the present.

The Principles Of Co-Operation

Now and then people are heard about who think they, or their group, are quite self-sufficient, and can get along best by themselves. In politics this type dies hard. In religion it is far from dead. There is a good deal of ecclesiastical self-sufficiency still in vogue. A little honest thought would cure all conceit about the matter, and convince them that no man lives to himself for a day or an hour.

Not only our language, but our food, clothing, education, privileges, come to us because others have lived and worked that it might be. If we are worth anything to-day materially or morally we are worth that because of the co-operation of others.

Co-operation is one of the principles that needs greater recognition. Moreover, it is wise to cultivate an atmosphere of good will toward all about us. We need them; they need us. The extension of commerce ought to mean the extension of brotherhood. A little more of the teaching of John Ruskin and John Bright applied to our political economy and our industrial methods, would go far toward creating favorable conditions for harmonious living. The jungle policy of competition violates not only the law of brotherhood, but the true principles of economics—Free Press

Twenty-four dollars a ton for hay. That is the price at which R. L. Hughson of Whitford has sold out the last of a 200-ton supply to neighbors who needed it for their stock, although at Vegreville on Monday last $17.50 was paid for a ton of Timothy. Mr. Hughson is one of the pioneers of the Whitford district. He has a long and hard fight, but has prospered. The early snow of last October found him with a large acreage of grain in the stock. He had a herd of good cattle and a bunch of horses to provide for through the winter, but had an ample supply of hay for the Mr. Hughson decided that he would feed his sheaves. As spring approached he found himself with hay to sell, worth twice $24 a ton, Mr. Hughson considered that was as much as any man should be called upon to pay, and sold at that figure. Many of his neighbors who had sheaves to sell disposed of them at a fixed price of 7 cents, refusing to raise the price above that figure. In times like these it "listens good" to know that men refuse to take advantage of the misfortunes of their neighbors. The country is better because of such men.

ARTLAND ARCUS

Messrs Cayford and Wells, of Wy-collar, shipped a car of horses from Artland, Friday last.

Jim Proctor, the genial machine man of Artland, was busily engaged erecting an Oliver gang plow Monday afternoon. "I predict" said he, speaking to the news hunter for these columns "a fair crop for 1920, and a bumper crop for 1921. I have been in this country for sixteen years and that's the way it goes."

The hunter for news then wandered across to the telephone office and observing the fresh marks of raking, said to "Billy" Wright. "Well I have to congratulate you upon being the first to rake up the yard, this season."

"Billy" promptly disclaimed all credit by remarking "Oh no, I was not the first." On hearing this the newscaster, decided that the search for that individual would be futile; and made a decision to go home and clean up his own yard.

Mrs Merritt and the new baby son are doing well.

It was one of those rare occasions when Sir E. Marshall Hall, the lawyer, lost a case, and he wasn't feeling so very happy over it.

"Your profession doesn't make angels out of men, does it?" said a medical friend, teasingly.

"No," retorted Sir Edward "that's one thing we leave to you doctors."
